Government Employs One of Six in State

SACRAMENTO—More than one person in six in the California work force is employed at some level of government. Governor Ronald Reagan's economic report of 1968 showed this to be the case, even though there was a decline in the number of state civil service workers. Of total employment in 1967, listed at 7,000,000, government employees made up 1,271,000. This category was topped only by manufacturing, with 1,637,000; trade, with 1,553,000; and services, with 1,375,000. OTHER employment categories included: transportation-communications-utilities, 449,000; finance-insurance-real estate, 367,000; construction, 341,000; agriculture, forestry and fisheries, 318,000; and mineral extraction, 33,000. "A relatively small increase occurred in state government; a decline in the number of civil service employees was exceeded by rises at state colleges and the university," it said.
